Referring to a statement that the Ohio is a great fertilizer where it overflows its banks, the Cincinnati Evening Post remarks: This will be joyful intelligence to those poor people who are going to raise corn and potatoes on the first and second floors and in the cellars of their houses.

The following is from the Cincinnati Enquirer:

"A recent death at Logansport, Ind., in the Police Biley has come into possession of the right names and complete identity of three men who were in the service of the rebels in their theory, two being in the Workhouse and one in the State Prison. On the 6th of December last a safe was broken into in the office of the Postmaster, and the neighborhood were arrested by Detective Kastner and Williams on suspicion that was in the possession of the prisoners, and they could not be found for the robbery. However, they were found to be in possession of forged concealed weapons, as they had received when arrested at Frankfort. On being released two, as was subsequently learned, were sent to the State Prison, and the third, on being turned to this city they were arrested again, and have been confined ever since. The safe had not yet been opened, and the amount taken is not known. The amount of the safe, v.2, $2000, and the sum extant on the safe, v.2, $200, and thirty days. Irons is one a man.

Frank is the man who was sentenced to the Kentucky penitentiary one year for the robbery of a store in Mincera in this county.

The New York Herald says: Since the unprecedented flood in the Ohio the idea has been seriously advanced that climate changes are going on and that the dissolution of future floods will become greater through an increase in the frequency of the annual rainfall. The theory of an increase in the yearly precipitation over the Ohio Valley in any part of the country is without foundation or support.

While, therefore, fears of a considerable climatic change in this sector may be dismissed by the present generation, the recent inundation should teach the people an important lesson. All the great Ohio floods on record have occurred in winter, showing that an insidious factor of that phenomenon is the melted snowfall. The lands subject to such overflows as those of 1832 and the last two floods should therefore be reserved for such crops only as do not require a summer soil. This precaution is observed hereafter the inundations will be comparatively harmless to agricultural interests, for the high water will always recede, as it has done this year, in time for planting all spring and summer crops.

THE DAILY BULLETIN.

THURSDAY EVE., FEB. 28, 1884.

ROSSER & McCARTHY,
Publishers and Proprietors,
To whom address all communication.

THE "STAFF".

On, Colonel! toot-toot! Colossal!
The woods are full of you;
Where one hangs out a few years back There now are dangling two.
Your marital tread is everywhere,
From border to internal;
Crack the head the hardest not
And out will pop a Colonel.
And so it goes on through,
From kids to thirty years old;
The State is full of singing cooks
With jingling pairs of spoons.
Your spaniels and plumed cocked-hat
Are mightier than the pen;
But, then, to make this mightiness,
We're out of common meat,
And should the catch-string still hang out,
The staff-door keep ajar,
There won't be men to raise the crops,
Unless there comes a war.
Short, short, the time is come,
I'd send it back with thanks;
And tell 'em that I'd rather be High private in the ranks.

LATER—THE LIGHTNING STRIKES.

"Official" "Ahr!"
Just in the wee peep in
"On the Governor's Staff,"

Well I reckon I grin.

At—
Or course not—why damn me,
There's nobody Colonel,

But me and your mammy.

The Flooded District.
A reporter for the BULLETIN has been through the flooded district in Maysville, Chester and Aberdeen and found the citizens busy repairing their damages. The loss of property in Aberdeen is greater probably than that of Maysville and Chester together. The little town looks as though it had been bombarded and taken by storm. Nearly the whole of Front street was destroyed, and every brick house on it was thrown down in whole or in part, while most of the frame ones were hoisted from their positions.
The large brick warehouse belonging to Mr. True, and which is a comparatively new building, fell in every side, while the brick dwelling of Mrs. Wheeler was leveled with the ground. The old Captain Church property is a heap of ruins. Fences and outbuildings are piled together in confusion, and the ruin extends up to Second street. The brick office adjoining Capt. Power's residence was laid flat, and the front and back wall of Bricker's store fell in, but it is useless to enumerate the losses. Eleven brick houses were destroyed and as many frame ones were moved from their places.
In Chester the loss is not so great.
Very few houses were moved, and here and in the Fifth Ward a large proportion of the damage was to paper and paint, and a number of persons lost their furniture. In old Maysville there are some serious losses. The eastern wall of the old Pickett warehouse fell in as the waters were receding, but the front wall did not fall. It was used as a store room by the cotton mills, but all their goods had been removed. The brick dwelling next to Rosier's, on Front street, which had a frame second story, had a part of the front wall and western wall fall to the ground. It belonged to James Rice, whose loss is quite heavy. His house occupied by Judge Coons was greatly damaged;
The front seems to have parted from the brick partition wall between it and the Burrow house, leaving a wide crack and threatening to fall. All of the Owens houses, near the bridge, floated off, but none were destroyed. The wall between the laundry and Capt. Thompson's saloon sprung out so that a new one has to be built, and the front wall fell out. A considerable portion of Front street, opposite the laundry, caved in this week and the street is cracked a few feet but not so bad as to endanger houses.
The brick house belonging to Miss Mary Hudnut, on Front street, has to be supported in front by props, as the front wall has sprung out. The action of the flood in many places is curious. The first floor of the old warehouse on the corner of Front and Wall is a total wreck this year, while last year it was hardly damaged, and that of the warehouse next it was destroyed last year but this year is uninjured. The pavement in front of the Duke property, on Front street, is torn up quite a distance. The above is only a mention of the chief damage now apparent, but, of course, many other buildings were damaged in other places not now apparent. Altogether, Maysville escaped wonderfully well.

It is said that Brown County has 125,
